50 Years ago

2015 sees the 50th anniversary of the first train movements on the line during the preservation era. On October 2nd 1965 "small prairie" No.4555 hauled two maroon auto trailers from Totnes to Buckfastleigh. The 10.00 service from Totnes on Saturday 14th February will replicate this working as closely as possible and will feature 4566 and two auto coaches. On Sunday 15th the same service will be operated by 3205 and two auto trailers - replicating the second such working over the branch in 1965.

6412 will return to service on Saturday 14th February after an extensive overhaul. The locomotive, which worked on the opening day of the line in 1969, will be appearing in British Railways livery for the first time in over 50 years and will operate a number of auto trains (push/pull) services over both days.

Additional goods trains will also operate and these, along with locomotive and stock allocations will be published closer to the event. All services and attractions are subject to availability on the day. Further details and updates will appear on the South Devon Railway websites, facebook pages and via Twitter.

Auto Trains & Diesel Railcars

The 1950s and 1960s saw the demise of steam power and the rise of diesel traction on Britain's railways. On lightly used West Country branch lines, the traditional GWR steam push and pull 'auto train' – where the locomotive could be driven from a driving compartment in the carriage – was replaced by new era British Railways diesel railcars.

Services from Monday 16th to Thursday 19th will reflect this interesting era with three return trips each day featuring the two car auto train worked by newly overhauled 64xx class 0-6-0 "pannier tank" No. 6412 which dates from 1934, plus an additional three return trips featuring the 1958 diesel railcar No. W55000.

Visitors will be able enjoy not only the unusual sight and sound of an auto train running in normal passenger service, but will also be able to enjoy the excellent views of the beautiful valley of the Dart from the diesel railcar which has a glass partition between the passenger seating area and the driving cab, allowing passengers to watch the driver at work and view the line ahead.
